Henan is the main production foundation of livestock and poultry in China. In recent years, focus has been put on to the export of such agri-products by the regional trade promotion agency. With the cooperation with the quality assurance department, the region is achieving increase in export volume, products and market diversification and gaining increasingly competitiveness. Products of duck, chicken, veal and beef are in the leading role in the country. In addition, Henan is also the premier supplier of provisions in China, supporting one-tenth of rice and wheat consumption.

Guizhou is one of the regions in China with favorable climate and soil for the plantation of high quality agricultural products, including potatoes, chilli, vegetables, seasonal fruits. In addition, Guizhou supplies high quality pig products to the majority of Zhujiang River Delta region. With the low level of industrialization of the province, it is developing its organic and green agri-zone of products with minimal use of pesticides and fertilizers. Such trend is well-supported by organic and green certification issued by the regional government. There are currently 282 and 40 certified green and organic agri-products respectively.
