About Freeze-Drying

Freeze-Drying or Lyophilization are the terms, and they have similar illustration, which means the process of removing water from the frozen product under low pressure. In other words, lyophilization process involves taking off water through sublimating (transition of water from the solid to the gas state) from frozen product in vacuum condition. Because of low pressure and low temperature in sublimation process, the product will keep its shape, taste and more than 90% of ingredients.
