Old Ceylon Regional Tea

Though Sri Lanka is a small pearl in the Indian Ocean, the land and terrain is as diverse as its people. Each tea region within the island boasts its own unique flavours and strengths. The difference in altitudes, climate and harvesting techniques add to the distinctive characteristic of each tea variant in this premium tea collection.

T345

Refreshing
DIMBULA

Leaf Tea | Metal Tin | Black Tea
Packing : 150g x 24

The teas of Dimbula, like all high-grown teas, are slow-growing and small-leaved. The complex geography of the region produces a variety of beneficent microclimates, which show up as differences in flavor. All, however, share the Dimbula character: a tea that produces a fine golden-orange hue in the cup, with a distinctive freshness to the flavor that leaves a clean feeling in the mouth after the tea is drunk. During the western quality season between March and May, the aromatic qualities of Dimbula tea increase, and notes of jasmine mixed with cypress can be detected.

T344

Classic
KANDY

Leaf Tea | Metal Tin | Black Tea
Packing : 150g x 24

The teas of the Kandy region are said to be particularly flavorsome. Infact, the region produces a broad range of strengths and styles: estates at lower elevations produce a larger leaf which gives a stronger-flavored beverage, while those higher-up grow a smaller leaf that yields a more subtle and delicate flavor. Kandy factories a broad mix of different 'grades' or leaf-particle sizes, from whole-leaf and semi-broken also produce grades through broken orange pekoes or 'BOPs' to BOP fannings. CTC-style teas are also produced. Kandy teas tend to produce a relatively bright infusion with a coppery tone.

T346

Distinctive
NUWARA ELIYA

Leaf Tea | Metal Tin | Black Tea
Packing : 150g x 24

Grown at high elevation at the very center of Sri Lanka's hill country, Nuwara Eliya tea enjoys two 'quality seasons, the eastern as well as the western. The balance between the two climatic systems varies from estate to estate. The tea produced here has a refined quality that easily sets it apart from lower-grown varieties. High altitude and year-round low temperatures produce a very slow-growing bush with unusually small leaves that take on an orange hue. The infused leaf acquires a greenish-yellow tone, with a subtle golden hue and a delicate yet fragrant bouquet.

T347

Predominant
RUHUNA

Leaf Tea | Metal Tin | Black Tea
Packing : 150g x 24

Ruhuna teas are defined as 'low-grown'. The tea-estates of the region all lie at altitudes between sea level and 2,000ft. The soil of Ruhuna, combined with the low elevation of the estates, causes the tea-bush to grow rapidly, producing a long, beautiful leaf that turns intensely black on withering and is particularly suited to 'rolling'. Ruhuna factories produce a wide variety of leaf styles and sizes, from prized 'tips' through whole- and semi-whole-leaf teas to 'fannings' and CTC.

T343

Equisite
UVA

Leaf Tea | Metal Tin | Black Tea
Packing : 150g x 24

The unique character of Uva tea is recognized and acknowledged all over the world. It was with tea grown and manufactured on his Uva estates that Sir Thomas Lipton, the great Victorian magnate, first persuaded Americans to take up the tea-drinking habit. The mellow, distinguished from that of any other. The Uva region produces a leaf that is more blackened by withering than that of any other district. The range of teas produced is wide. The tea has a pungent and slightly mentholated character.
