It has existed since ancient times and continues to be a significant issue, particularly in certain regions. Pirates are armed with modern weapons and often use small motorboats to attack and board ships. The international community faces challenges in bringing piracy to an end as many attacks occur in international waters. The history of piracy is filled with well-known figures and has been romanticized in popular culture. A flag is a textile fabric of a specific colour or pattern, fixed to a pole, which is suspended from a mast (cross-staff flag) or pole, and attached to the pole. (The flag is not rigidly attached, but is only tied at the corners.) The shape of the flag is usually rectangular, but other shapes are also possible. Its original purpose was military, used to identify and lead troops. vFlags of three different colours are called tricolour (from the French word meaning "three colours"), as are the French flag, which is made up of three vertical stripes of equal size, the Italian flag and the Hungarian flag, which is made up of horizontal stripes of equal size.
